An Introduction to our Lent drama series

Sparks Around the Fire: Compassion and the Cross - is one big fiction—with hints of truth throughout. So, just to be clear: all of it is made up.

Yes, Jesus did make a final journey to Jerusalem in the weeks before Holy Week, most likely traveling in the company of his twelve disciples and other followers. Yes, there are plenty of references to biblical material; each act reflects on one particular biblical text.

I invented all the dialogue in my imagination. I did draw on my scholarly study of the Bible, including both historical and theological insights. But the actual words said and deciding who says it—that's all me.

Why "Compassion and the Cross?" For some thirty years now, I've been convinced that compassion was at the very heart of Jesus' message ... and that his proclamation and practice of compassion is what led to the cross.

As these brief plays accompany you on your Lenten journey, I hope you find that these fictional conversations, set up as "sparks around the fire" lead you into deeper conversation yourselves: with the texts, with one another, and with your own lives.
